The diversity of funding sources for colleges and universities across North America creates a challenge in both the planning and execution of projects. From grants, bonds, government funds, and special purpose taxes, managing project finances presents a challenge. In many cases these different funding sources will have specific, and often complex, rules for how the funds are appropriated, released and utilized. The challenge is magnified when multiple sources of funds must be managed across many projects at the program level.

Kahua for Education Sources of Funds provides facilities and operations groups at colleges and universities a complete solution to streamline the dynamic management of funds across programs and projects. You can easily define the availability and assignment methods for all funding sources, and tie funding to budgets, commitments and invoices. And with Kahua's reporting and dashboards you'll have a 360-degree view of funding with historical, real-time and projected visibility to meet today's reporting requirements and enable continuous improvement in managing funds.
